Embattled Pussy Riot band invited to speak at Harvard

Cambridge. Kremlin critics will conduct a Q&A with Crimson.

Pussy Riot are coming to Cambridge.

Members of the political punk band are best known for being jailed in their native Russia after they performed a "punk prayer" in a Russian cathedral that was critical of then-prime minister, now president Vladimir Putin. Their arrests and imprisonment spurred an international debate about freedom of speech and expression.

Two members of the group are slated to appear at Harvard's JFK Jr. Forum this Monday evening. While the event is open to the public, attendees were already drawn from a lottery earlier this week. The talk features no set agenda and audience members will have the opportunity to ask questions.

The talk is entitled "A Conversation with the Feminist Protest Art Collective Pussy Riot" and is being hosted by the school's Kennedy School of Government.

Pussy Riot members Maria Alyokhina and Nadezhda Tolokonnikova are scheduled to speak. Jill Dougherty, a former CNN journalist and current fellow at the Kennedy School, will moderate the discussion.

After their punk prayer performance at a Russian Orthodox cathedral, members of the band were found guilty of hooliganism and sentenced to two years in jail.

They were granted amnesty in December 2013, although some members speculated they were released to curry favor in the international community in the run-up to the Winter Olympics in Sochi.

During her time in prison, Tolokonnikova went on hunger strike to protest prison conditions.

Witness paid $66K in case vs. Tsarnaev friend

Stephen Silva has pleaded not guilty to possessing an illegal gun, along with drug trafficking charges.

Federal prosecutors said they paid over $66,000 to an unidentified witness who has helped them in a case against a friend of accused Boston bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev.

The friend, 21-year-old Stephen Silva, pleaded not guilty in federal court last month to trafficking heroin and possessing an illegal handgun. He allegedly supplied the gun that prosecutors say Tsarnaev and his late brother Tamerlan Tsarnaev used in the shooting death of MIT Police Officer

Sean Collier after the deadly April 15, 2013, bombings.

The witness was cooperating in the drug investigation against Silva, and was at one time a member of a violent street gang who was facing federal gun and firearm charges, according to court papers filed Wednesday. The money he received covers "payments for services, expenses and relocation" as well as speeding tickets and an outstanding fine to a previous landlord.

"I think [$66,000] is an unusually high amount," said Suffolk University law professor Chris Dearborn. "It is something the general public should be uncomfortable with. It's our tax dollars, right? It's one thing to give a plane ticket to someone who has to come testify, but paying for someone's expenses and getting them out of traffic tickets — a lot of people are uncomfortable with it."

However, Dearborn said it's "perfectly legal and ethical" for feds to reward witnesses aiding in an investigation.

"A lot of situations like this can get pretty unsavory," he said, adding that if the witness testifies he should "be treated with very cautious eyes."

Fire investigators probe blaze at defunct business

Firefighters had to battle the blaze from a cemetery adjacent to the property. / DIANA TUTKO, METRO

Roxbury. An old pharmaceutical building was destroyed.

Fire officials are looking into the cause of a 5-alarm fire that tore through a vacant pharmaceutical building Wednesday night, prompting concerns over toxic fumes.

The blaze broke out around 7:30 p.m. at 423 LaGrange St. Firefighters knocked out the flames within hours, but went back to work around 5 a.m. Thursday after the fire sparked back up.

Boston Fire Department Spokesman Steve MacDonald said Thursday afternoon that the cause of the fire as well as its origin were under investigation.

Damage was estimated at $2 million, MacDonald said. The building was reportedly purchased earlier this month, and was slated to be turned into roughly 60 housing units.

The building had been used to manufacture asthma inhalers until three years ago. There was concern over the possibility that hazardous chemicals could have been released into the air, though fire officials said the potentially toxic materials had been removed from the building.

Hailo on Thursday announced a new feature in Boston which allows passengers to pay for a street-hailed taxi ride through the app.

Pay With Hailo uses Apple's iBeacon technology to automatically recognize when a passenger is in a Hailo driver's vehicle. The app then invites passengers to connect and pay for their ride with one simple click.

'Gotham'

FOX, premieres 8 p.m., Sept. 22

What exactly did the city of Gotham do before Bruce Wayne put on a mask and started battling around? This show suggests that Batman's bud Commissioner Gordon was in charge of saving the day back then. Here, he's just a detective trying to outwit the likes of future Joker, future Riddler and future Penguin. Basically, it's the "before they were stars" of Batman villains.

Check back in a few weeks for our interview with Ben McKenzie about his role on "Gotham." / FOX

New TV finally returns!

Summer TV has packed its bags, which means our beautiful best friend, New TV, is back in town. We've broken down a list of what you can expect from the incoming crop of shows — and picked out a few old ones to embrace like the beloved companions they are. LISA WEIDENFELD

'SELFIE'

Cancellation watch

In a perfect world, all these little flowers would survive and thrive and air six seasons and a movie; alas, some of them are going to get the boot. Here are our picks for which new shows you might not be seeing for too long.

1 'Selfie,' ABC, premieres 8 p.m., Sept. 30 Someday, someone will find a show worthy of John Cho. This is not that show. Of course, given the terrible things "Sleepy Hollow" put him through, we can't blame him for seeking something new.

2 'Mulaney,' FOX, premieres 9:30 p.m., Oct. 5 Former "SNL" writer John Mulaney takes his talents to the sitcom world, bringing fellow "SNL" alum Nasim Pedrad with him. Martin Short and Elliot Gould join them, but that didn't stop NBC from passing on the show. Fox is hoping to overcome tepid word of mouth.

'MARRY ME'

Return of the rom-com

Remember "Mad About You"? Apparently, so do TV execs, because there are some romantic sitcoms hitting the small screen this year. The genre may be a bit DOA in the movie world, but TV hasn't given up on it.

1 'Marry Me,' NBC, premieres 9 p.m., Oct. 14 Fans of the underwatched "Happy Endings" should watch this, since it again pairs series creator David Caspe with cast member Casey Wilson. Also on hand: Ken Marino, who you may recognize from "Party Down" and "Children's Hospital."

2 'A to Z,' NBC, premieres 9:30 p.m., Oct. 2 Cristin Milioti (the mother of "How I Met Your Mother") finds herself in another "narrated from the future" show. This time, Katey Sagal tells viewers how long she'll date Ben Feldman's Andrew. We just hope her character survives this one.

'PARKS AND RECREATION'

Swan songs

A few beloved shows will be finishing out a final season. The best time to think about this is in September, when you've still got a full season of TV left and no on-again/off-again couples have been shoehorned back together to make for a happy ending.

1 'Parenthood,' NBC, returns 10 p.m., Sept. 25 NBC's weekly cry-o-rama has been on the verge of cancellation the whole time it's aired. This time, it really is the end. Series creator Jason Katims has said a broader story unites the Braverman clan this season.

2 'Parks and Recreation,' NBC, return TBD Ready to see what the future holds? "Parks" jumped three years forward in time. The premiere date is TBD, but we included it here because Amy Poehler's Leslie Knope has admitted she already has a eulogy written for her coworker called "Ron Swanson, a swan song."

'BAD JUDGE'

Women behaving oddly

This premiere season features a few shows whose main premise seems to be that the female leads are behaving in some way outside the norm for women.

1 'Bad Judge,' NBC, premiere She's a judge, but she also drinks! Kate Walsh stars in this comedy about a woman who somehow manages to have a serious adult job while still having a fun private life.

2 'How to Get Away with Murder,' ABC, premieres 10 p.m., Sept. 25 She's a law professor, but she has unorthodox methods and might be a murderer: The latest from certified TV genius Shonda Rimes, this show revolves around a genius law school instructor played by Oscar-winner Viola Davis. Has Davis gotten away with murder, or have the students? It's unclear just yet, but someone will probably be trying to do it.

'SCORPION'

Superheroes and supergeniuses

There are many ways to save the day on TV and, as usual, there are a few different types of people trying to do it this season.

1 'The Flash,' CW, premieres 8 p.m., Oct. 7 He's really fast, and he can save the day! This one's a spinoff of the ever-popular "Arrow." Since that one has quickly grown into one of the hotter CW shows, we have high hopes for its new buddy, which might build up a fan base even faster. See what we did there?

2 'Scorpion,' CBS, premieres 9 p.m., Sept. 22 The heroes of this show are a little more real world-based. They're a group of slightly erratic geniuses who don't do so well in the social skills department, but are good at working together to take down threats to the homeland.

2 CULTURE

Returns

These returning shows all sport a central couple who spend a lot of time traveling back and forth along the spectrum of possibly getting together. That may not be the only reason you watch, but we suspect it's something you've been thinking about since the shows had their finales.

'Sleepy Hollow,' FOX, returns 9 p.m., Sept. 22

1 We don't really want to say this is a will they/won't they, since we feel Abbie and Ichabod are platonic soulmates, but we know lots of fans are hoping these two apocalypse-fightin' kids get together. But Ichabod's wife just got released from purgatory, so this may not be their season.

'Brooklyn Nine-Nine,' FOX, returns 8:30 p.m., Sept. 28

2 This comedy raised the question of its central couple getting together last season: Andy Samberg's Jake Peralta asked out Melissa Fumero's Amy Santiago just before going on a six-month undercover mission.

They might be less "will they/won't they" and more "are they/aren't they" when the show returns.

Interview. The 'Ray Donovan' star hunkers down with Metro for a few beers and some serious talk

Dash Mihok is remarkably good about not giving away any details about the last few episodes of the current season of "Ray Donovan" — even after he's been plied with a couple beers. "You know my show, they can whack me at any time, so I kind of can't talk too much. They won't hesitate to whack somebody, even if you're a family member," he says.

He does admit that Liev Schreiber, who plays the titular Ray, is pretty safe from any vindictive whacking; it would be weird if they killed off Ray Donovan on "Ray Donovan." Or maybe not. "They could just start calling it 'The Donovans' or something," Mihok offers. "No, he's safe."

On the series, currently wrapping up its second season and

"RAY DONOVAN" AIRS SUNDAYS
AT 9 P.M. ON SHOWTIME.
FILMMAGIC

recently renewed for a third, Mihok has had plenty of time to explore the tortured soul of Buncho Donovan, a luxury he attributes to the nature of television. "In general, you see all these movie actors moving to TV because it's racier, it's more interesting and they're enjoying getting to portray these people that are really, really complicated and layered and flawed for more than two hours," he says.

He's not talking about TV in general, though, but rather cable. "Network is network. It's fun here and there, but you don't really get to explore anybody," he

Quoted

"Network is network. It's fun here and there, but you don't really get to explore anybody." Mihok says. "No offense to CBS, my parent company, but I don't watch anything on there. There's so much on streaming and on cable now."

In fact, Mihok is so enamored with the television world that he's getting behind the camera. "I just directed a pilot and screened it at my agency last week. We're going to sell it," he says. "It's a really dark comedy, and it could go to places like Amazon or Netflix. It's got pretty racy language, but there are all these outlets for that now. We just made it ourselves, and we're going to shop it. You could never do that before." NED EHRBAR

Travels

Heading overseas

Mihok hasn't left movies behind. With two films wrapped — including Mike Flanagan's "Somnia" — and another in production, he is firmly in both the film and television worlds. And he's still got a few items on his wish list.

"You know what I want to do? I want to shoot a movie in Europe. I've never done that. You'd think that would've happened by now," he says. "I mean, I'd love to be the lead and work every day, but if I didn't have to, it would be great to have those days off so you can just take day trips to other places that you haven't been. It's like, 'Let's just bounce to Morocco for a couple of days,' and it's like going to Florida."

asked lead Tom Mison.

When the second season picks up, hopefully everyone gets out of these dire straits pretty quickly, because they've got an apocalypse to prevent.

That's the big question: Not only how do people get out, but if they get out of those situations. And then once we are out, how does it affect the relationships? And that's something that resonates throughout the rest of the season. The Horseman of War doesn't come with bombs and guns; he comes as the type of person who can plant little seeds of doubt in relationships.

How is the relationship between Ichabod, his partner-in-crime Abbie and his wife, Katrina, affected?

What do you do with relationships when the apocalypse is coming? Tricky. And it's a bit of a mood-killer. [Laughs] There are new relationships; there are new interests. There's someone who has his eye on Abbie. There's of course still Katrina, and how do you reach her when she's with the Horseman of Death?

Do people outside the gang realize a war is being waged?

Well, how do you tell people the apocalypse is coming and not get locked up? [Laughs] That's another dilemma — we have to be a secretive army.

Will Ichabod's wardrobe be better adapted to the modern world this season?

The way our writers are dealing with Ichabod in the modern world ... I'm always excited by it. Last season he meets a character [who is] into battle reenactments and she gives him some new clothes. And he might need another change, so he might go and revisit her. But that style, that's home for him. The moment that Ichabod's in jeans and a T-shirt with a crew cut, you lose a lot of [who he is].

Bonus question

After reading the script for the Season 1 finale, did you have the same 'holy crap' reaction that fans did watching it?

Yeah. I had a conversation with Alex Kurtzman, one of the executive producers, who told me [co-star] John Noble was the Horseman of War. I had no idea. I knew when John joined us that he was going to be revealed to be my son; I didn't know that he would be a bad son, so that was a huge surprise. Everyone is left in a situation that I didn't see coming, but they'd been planning it.

Review

'Dolphin Tale 2'

Remember that film about a dolphin that didn't have a tail and at the end she got one? That slender story actually got a sequel. This one is about getting the dolphin a new friend.

The lowdown: Even more so than its predecessor, there's so little going on in "Dolphin Tale 2" that it can almost feel like an avant-garde film. Much like how Andy Warhol once created a seven-hour film consisting of a single shot of the Empire State Building, the makers of these films stretch slim non-narratives over relatively epic lengths. Not much happens and it takes forever to get there. Its saving grace is how surreally nice it is — probably the most thoroughly wholesome movie since David Lynch's "The Straight Story." At least that one had more story. MATT PRIGGE

Idris Elba swears he's nice

Interview. The actor always wants to try new things, like playing a psycho in "No Good Deed."

Idris Elba is looking to challenge himself during our interview. "Right now I'm cracking open a beer with a lighter, which is hard to do, and at the same time sound genuinely interested in our conversation — which I am!" he insists. We'll have to take him at this word. In Elba's latest, the thriller "No Good Deed," he relishes playing mean and nasty as an ex-con menacing a single mother (Taraji P. Henson).

Why won't you leave nice Taraji P. Henson alone?

Yeah, right? I watched it yesterday with an audience and I kept asking myself, "Why are you there? Leave her alone, she's so sweet!" My character has this sort of relentless drive. He's quite creepy, the character. I was watching it thinking, "Wow, I must be an actor because if I am really like that in real life, man, I wouldn't have any friends."

This has almost a nice throw-back feel to it.

Yeah, it's a genre film. It's quite reminiscent of old thrillers. I was a co-producer on this, and the director and I talked about that: "Let's remind audiences that they're in a thriller." You're going to hear thunder and you're going to hear mood music and stuff. For some reason we stopped making those types of films, but they work.

What kind of projects are interesting you now?

I'm into being very varied, sort of shaking up genres. This film, for example — one could argue in America that this is penned as an African-American film, but it really isn't. It isn't a specific market film, it's just a film. My personal taste is to try to turn these genres on their heads and break down these lines that we have that segment film one way or another. And also personally, I'm into really big, full characters at the moment. That's what I want to develop: iconic characters like Mandela, like Luther.

Not Bond, not James Bond

Does the talk about how you should be the next James Bond still come up a lot?

Oh yeah, everyone keeps asking me about it. It's died down a bit; maybe it's starting to pass. But it's still just a rumor, unfortunately.

But you're going to do more "Luther," right?

Yeah, man, I'm definitely trying to do that. That's something that's happened over the last few days, where I've been with Neil [Cross, the show's creator] and we've discussed it in depth. We're going to move forward and try to pull off this two-hour special for TV.

Review

Tom Hardy is a weird, quiet guy in Dennis Lehane's 'The Drop'

The rare film written by the oft-adapted Dennis Lehane ("Mystic River") finds a lonely working-class Brooklyn bartender (Tom Hardy) at the center of a headache involving a robbery, Chechen mobsters and a loose-cannon thug (Matthias Schoenaerts). There's also a cute dog.

The lowdown: The films made from Lehane's novels are usually grandiose and plot-heavy, but Lehane's first script feels like a short story — a character study in no particular hurry to get to its hair-raising conclusion. Even more than the sometimes too studied "Mystic River," it digs deep into its dirty locale, soaking up the feel of a location that feels unstuck in time, where the most modern thing is that the mobster overlords are from Chechnya.

"The Drop" can be a bit too digressive at times; there's perhaps too much of the adorable pit bull that Hardy's lug rescues from a trash can. But its shagginess is part of the master plan, which also includes casting Hardy, who's quiet and shy yet vaguely eccentric. Like the film, he seems like he's in a stupor, yet occasionally reveals bursts of left-field confidence. When he and the film snap into focus, watch out.

Carving up some dinner with Jamie Bissonnette

Hot Chef. The Toro and Coppa chef talks getting over the ick factor of charcuterie and offal.

After winning over Bostonians at Toro and Coppa, chef Jamie Bissonnette took his talents to New York and opened Toro NYC. Despite this full schedule, he's also taken the time to publish "The New Charcuterie Cookbook." The book aims to show people how to make cured meats at home. We talked to him about how to ease into eating the more unfamiliar parts of the animal.

What made you decide to go for it and write a cookbook about an unusual topic like this?

My dad just started cooking in the last 10 years, and I give him recipes based off of stuff that we do at the restaurant. It was like, "Oh, this might be kind of fun." So I looked at it as a challenge. I'm also the kind of person where if someone's like, "Hey do you want to do this?" and if I've never done it before, chances are, unless it's like skydiving or something with heights, which I'm terrified of, the answer's yes. I want to be able to say that I tried. Even if I fail — Every time you don't try, you always fail, right?

How do you talk people into trying new kinds of meat?

Eye contact and a smile? It's kind of true, though. If you build trust with people, they'll be into it. You give them delicious food and you cook it properly. They can trust you that you're going to make them a good meatball, that you're going to make them a perfect paella. You build their trust with the simple foods. Then you say, "Hey, I'm going to give you something that you're used to. I've made you a really awesome roast beef. Well, I'm going to give you another roast beef, but this time it's beef heart." And just be positive and smile.

Since you're a charcuterie expert, why are sweetbreads called that?

I have no idea.

It's very misleading.

I always have to put on the menu, "veal sweetbread," and I would still say, one time out of 10, somebody gets them and says, "I'm a vegetarian."

Bonus question

What's the best intro to offal?

The hardest part of cooking some offal is the texture. If you can get through that, it's pretty awesome. Crispy sweetbreads are a good introduction. I always tell people, perfectly cooked and fried sweetbreads have the same texture that chicken McNuggets do.

What does US gain from fighting ISIS?

Re: 'Obama unveils his strategy to eliminate ISIL' (Metro, Sept. 11) In his Wednesday address, President Obama appears to be avoiding the mistakes and pitfalls of his immediate predecessor, although his proposed strategy is unlikely to please or even quiet his many critics (especially given nothing short of his impeachment would actually accomplish that). Unfortunately for the rest of us, he appears poised to repeat the same mistakes made by Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon with Vietnam: excessive — and ultimately counterproductive — use of air power, dependence upon unreliable regional partners, early promises of no troops being deployed and no clear benchmarks for measuring success. The administration's chief counterterrorism adviser has already stated that ISIS poses no imminent nor credible danger to America's security, so what justifies such a broad and hazardous commitment beyond the bloodlust of a handful of pundits? After the last 13 years of sacrificing our troops, treasure and freedoms in the name of "homeland security," people deserve a straight answer on this one question, but one I suspect we will never receive.

3 Patriots storylines to watch vs. Vikings

NFL. The Patriots seek their first win of 2014 against the Vikings in Minnesota.

The thought of the Patriots beginning a season 0-2 under Bill Belichick has been something close to unimaginable in New England's championship-contending, modern era. In fact, it hasn't happened in 13 years. In 2001, the Pats lost to the Bengals and Jets before they blew out the Colts in Week 3 — Tom Brady's first game as the Patriots starter.

After witnessing the Patriots' lackluster performance in Week 1 of this season, and with the knowledge that Minnesota — New England's opponent on Sunday — looks like it is far from a pushover in 2014, an 0-2 record to start the season is now certainly conceivable. The Patriots are just three-point favorites against the Vikings heading into Sunday (1 p.m., CBS). Yes, it's a road game for New England and yes, the Vikings feature arguably the best offensive player in the league in Adrian Peterson. But the Vikings did go 5-10-1 last year, and have finished dead last in the NFC North in three of the last four seasons.

MATT BURKE
@BurkeMetroBos
matthew.burke@metro.us

1 Fear the Z-man

Mike Zimmer had been an assistant coach in the NFL for 20 years, but last Sunday's 34-6 victory over St. Louis was Zimmer's first game as a head coach at any level. Not a bad way to make a debut.

The Vikings' new head man made his name in the league as a sharp defensive mind in an era when the focus across the league shifted to the offensive side of the ball. Zimmer was a defensive coach for the Cowboys from 1994 through 2006, before stops in Atlanta and Cincinnati.

As a defensive coordinator, Zimmer was 1-2 against the Patriots with Tom Brady at quarterback. Brady's numbers have been average in the three games as his quarterback rating has averaged out to 78.7. His career average rating is 95.5.

Zimmer got the best of Brady last season, when his Bengals defense held No. 12 to just 18 completions on 38 pass attempts for 197 yards. Brady also threw a pick in the Cincinnati rain.

TOM BRADY HAS HAD MIXED SUCCESS AGAINST MIKE ZIMMER DEFENSES.

2 Rush to judgment

Peterson always has a chip on his shoulder, so one can bet he's not happy about a wide receiver on his own team out-rushing him in Week 1 as Cordarrelle Patterson exploded for 102 yards and a touchdown.

It's no guarantee that Peterson will take out his frustrations on the Pats defense this Sunday, however. In Week 6 last year against Carolina, Peterson rushed for only 62 yards. He responded in Week 7 by rushing for only 28 yards against the Giants and wasn't much better in Week 8 against Green Bay as he ran for 60 yards. He was also held under 100 yards in back-to-back games against Washington and Seattle in November of last season.

By the numbers

Dolphins running back Knowshon Moreno torched the Patriots defense last week, rushing for 134 yards and a touchdown on 24 carries. Miami's Lamar Miller also rushed for 59 yards.

ADRIAN PETERSON WAS HELD TO 75 YARDS RUSHING LAST WEEK.

ROBERT BLANTON

Handle the pressure

One can bet that Zimmer's game plan will be a carbon copy of Miami's from last week. The Dolphins sacked Brady four times in Week 1 while the Vikings feasted on the two hapless quarterbacks the Rams trotted out. Minnesota's pressure forced two interceptions, one of which was returned by Harrison Smith for an 81-yard touchdown. Robert Blanton and rookie Anthony Barr led the Vikings in tackles in the impressive defensive effort. It seems as though the Pats will play the same offensive line unit this Sunday that was dominated for much of the Dolphins game, as left tackle Nate Solder, left guard Marcus Cannon, center Dan Connolly, right guard Jordan Devey and right tackle Sebastian Vollmer got the brunt of the snaps with the first team in practice this week.

Familiar face

Cassel and Brady remain close

Sunday in Minnesota, the Patriots will face Matt Cassel for the first time since he led them to an 11-5 record in 2008. Cassel got the starting nod for New England after starter Tom Brady went down with a season-ending ACL injury in Week 1 of that season. Cassel remains grateful for the opportunity in Foxboro six years ago and remains close with Brady. "I got to learn from one of the best to ever play the game, and he was such a mentor to me," Cassel said of Brady. "He's a great friend ... We keep in contact all the time. Even in the offseason, we golf and work out sometimes and do those things. We still talk once every few weeks."

The old college try

Boston College will have its hands full with Southern Cal

For the second straight weekend, the BC football team has its work cut out for them in a nationally televised game as they welcome powerhouse USC to Alumni Stadium on Saturday (8 p.m., ESPN). The Trojans, ranked No. 9 overall, bring more talent to The Heights than Pitt did last Friday and that should be a scary thing for the Eagles considering the Panthers dismissed them rather easily, 30-20.

The Eagles led Pitt, 7-3, after one quarter, but the Panthers ripped off 17 points in the second quarter and never looked back. The Eagles' biggest issue was containing Pitt's running game as James Conner shredded the BC defense for 214 yards and a touchdown on 36 carries.

Offensively, the Eagles were something of a one-man show as quarterback Tyler Murphy rushed for 92 yards and also threw for 134 yards. He was, however, picked off twice.

USC made headlines this week as athletic director Pat Haden was fined $25,000 by the Pac-12 for coming down from the press box to the sidelines to argue with officials after questionable calls on the field. Head coach Steve Sarkisian was also reprimanded for the incident, in which Haden received a text message from a USC staffer that his presence was needed on the sidelines.

The Trojans ultimately got the outcome they wanted to last Saturday, beating No. 13 Stanford 13-10.

The Eagles will need to keep a close eye on USC back Javorius Allen, who scampered for a career-high 154 yards last week. MATT BURKE

No. 1

Angels
(90-55)

The Angels picked a good time to play their best ball of the season, with Oakland struggling, as they have opened up a nine-game lead in the AL West. Mike Trout is well on his way to an MVP season as his 103 RBIs lead all of the AL. Their plus-147 run differential is the second-best in the game.

No. 2

Orioles
(86-59)

Baltimore has quietly gone about its business and has built a 10-game lead in the AL East. Nelson Cruz's 39 homers lead the AL.

No. 3

Dodgers
(83-63)

The Dodgers have opened up a 2.5 game lead in the division. Clayton Kershaw is the first pitcher in the NL to have reached 18 wins.

No. 4

Nationals
(82-62)

Jordan Zimmerman is in the midst of a good run as his 2.93 ERA is 10th in the National League. The Nats are opening an 11-game road trip.

No. 5

Athletics
(81-64)

Since trading Yoenis Cespedes, the A's are 15-23. Despite the slump, Josh Donaldson has the best WAR in the game at 7.1.

No. 6

Cardinals
(80-66)

Adam Wainwright has continued to put up solid numbers as he has 17 wins and a 2.62 ERA, fifth in the National League.

No. 7

Royals
(80-64)

KC and Detroit continue to go back and forth, with the Royals holding a one-game lead. The Royals are in the midst of a 10-game homestand.

No. 8

Tigers
(80-66)

Victor Martinez, the AL Player of the Month in August, has raised his average to .333, second in the AL. Detroit hosts Cleveland this weekend.

No. 9

Giants
(80-65)

Buster Posey's tear of late has put him in the top five in batting in the NL with a .306 average. The Giants and Dodgers tangle this weekend.

No. 10

Mariners
(79-66)

Closer Fernando Rodney leads all of baseball with 44 saves. He'll need to stay hot if Seattle wants to squeeze into the AL postseason.

No. 11

Pirates
(76-69)

The Pirates refuse to go down without a fight. Winners of five of their last six, they trail division-leading St. Louis by 3 1/2 games.

No. 12

Blue Jays
(76-69)

Toronto has won eight of its last 10 games to give itself a long shot at the wild card. The season-ending injury to Melky Cabrera won't help.

No. 13

Braves
(75-71)

The Braves have their eyes set on the wild card with the Nats set to take the division. A series against the Rangers is just what the doctor ordered.

No. 14

Brewers
(75-71)

Milwaukee is slumping at the worst time, having lost 10 of 12. After that fast start to the year, they're 1 1/2 games out of the wild card.

No. 15

Yankees
(74-69)

Before the focus shifts entirely to Derek Jeter, the Yankees will look to make a playoff charge. They're 4 1/2 games out of the wild card.

No. 16

Indians
(76-69)

Cleveland is 43-30 at home, but is just 31-39 on the road. The poor road record is why they'll likely be on the outside looking in at October baseball.
